Climate change can impact our mental health and emotional well-being, from the way we feel about our altered home environments to how our brains are affected by increased heat and wildfire smoke. Yet changes to our climate also provide an opportunity to re-think our lifestyles and our communities in ways that promote resilience, personal growth, and well-being. Universal health care, worldwide, is within reach

The case for it is a powerful one—including in poor countries

“Every year, between US$200 billion and $1 trillion are spent in ‘mandatory’ alms and voluntary charity across the Muslim world.”

Islamic Finance analysts estimate

“Around the Muslim world, there is an increased awareness that if ‘zakat’ distribution and management is made effective, we can bring revolutions in terms of development - not only for the Muslims, but people around the world.”

Why health care costs are making consumers more afraid of medical bills than an actual illness

- Health care costs are spiraling higher, but patient visits to a doctor have been on the decline.
- A growing number of consumers are staying away out of fear of big bills.
- However, "untimely visits or delay of visits to the physician ultimately leads to the increased cost of care," the Cleveland Clinic's CEO told CNBC.

People's Pension Trust Ghana

Worldwide there lies a grand opportunity of increasing accessibility to micropension products. Globally 1.8 billion people are working in the informal sector. All with limited access to pension products. In 2016, Enviu and partners launched one of the world's first micropension companies: People's Pension Trust Ghana.

Visualizing China's Most Ambitious Megaproject

"The glory of the ancient silk routes shows that geographical distance is not insurmountable. If we take the first courageous step towards each other, we can embark on a path leading to friendship, shared development, peace, harmony and a better future"

Chinese President Xi Jinping

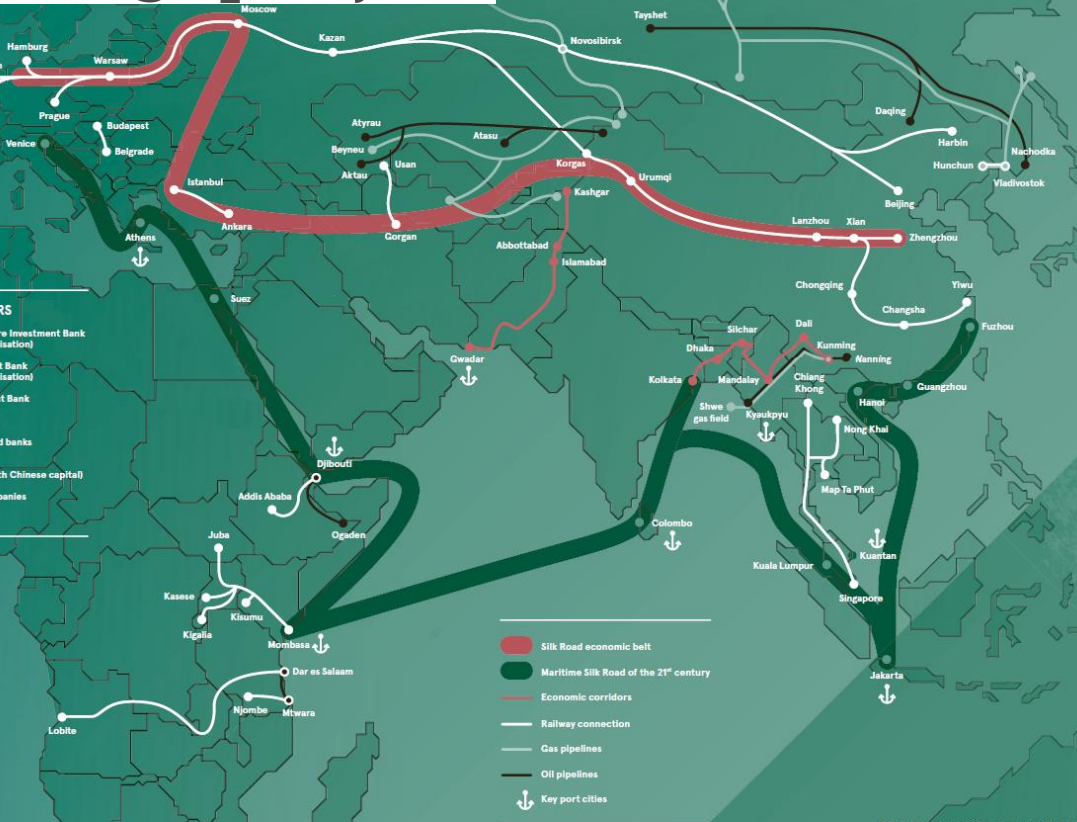

Indian prime minister Narendra Modi has been an outspoken critic of the plan, notably the China-Pakistan Economic Corridor passing through the disputed Pakistan-occupied Kashmir. India has labelled the project "a colonial enterprise, leaving debt and broken communities in its wake", and was a notable boycotter of the OBOR summit last year

One Road initiative (OBOR) will stretch from the very edge of East Asia to East Africa and Central Europe, connecting nearly two thirds of the world's population. Through continuous networks of highways, railways, ocean routes and ports, the scheme will open up cross-border connectivity and encourage a further integration of international markets.

Aside from kickstarting economic growth across China and many developing nations, many have questioned the true political intentions behind Beijing's masterplan, fearing potential renminbi internationalisation to world domination. Whatever happens, with $1 trillion-worth of infrastructure works planned or already underway, OBOR will transform the Eurasian land mass and reshape global trade as we know it. How China will fund the works still remains to be seen, but a need for private capital involvement is certain, along with co-financing with member governments along the route.

Pioneering legislation for a Sustainable Wales

Posted 29th April 2015 & filed under Blog, Education, Environment, Intergenerational Justice.

How to secure the ambitions of sustainability for the long term and for future generations in government and other institutions – that was the focus of a two-day conference in Cardiff this week. And, by a stroke of good fortune, it coincided with the official sealing by the Welsh Assembly of the “Well-being of Future Generations Act” – a triumphant moment, as Antony Mason reports.

MASLOW'S HIERARCHY OF NEEDS

ABRAHAM MASLOW

Abraham Harold Maslow (April 1, 1908 - June 8, 1970) was a psychologist who studied positive human qualities and the lives of exemplary people. In 1954, Maslow created the Hierarchy of Human Needs and expressed his theories in his book, Motivation and Personality.

Self-Actualization - A person's motivation to reach his or her full potential. As shown in Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs, a person's basic needs must be met before self-actualization can be achieved.
